The Teheran Conference, 1943

The formation of NATO, 1949

The Prague Spring, 1968

The fall of the Berlin Wall, 1989

good opening,

I think that the Teheran Conference, 1943 was highly significant to international relations. This is because the Britain, USA and USSR became allies. Therefore this has improved the relations of countries with different ideologies because all three were working for the same aim, and have worked together in future to defeat Germany. Further development of your point.

In my opinion the Prague Spring, 1968 was of [major importance] to international relations. This is because the population of Czechoslovakia clearly showed they want an end to the communism. Therefore this has forced the Soviet leader Brezhnev to invade Czechoslovakia because his doctrine made him prevent any communist country turning away from this ideology.

The Prague Spring, 1968

The fall of the Berlin Wall, 1989

POINT I think that the fall of the QUALIFY Berlin wall, 1989 was undoubtedly EXPLAIN important because it has shown that communism is "falling" apart.
FURTHER DEV. Therefore this has made communism weak because the world has seen that people who were living under communist regime didn't like it and wanted to become capitalist. (4)
